

Red House Named a Chief Marketer 2026 Agency of the Year

The firm was honored based on strategic excellence, creative innovation, and measurable impact.

ATLANTA—(BUSINESS WIRE)—December 3, 2025—Red House, an award-winning B2B marketing firm now in its 24th year, has been named a 2026 Agency of the Year by Chief Marketer, the leading information resource for Fortune 1000 marketers. The recognition reflects Chief Marketer's mission of recognizing the firms driving measurable impact, elevating brand storytelling, and shaping the future of marketing.

As part of its coveted Agencies of the Year program, Chief Marketer spotlights the industry's most visionary and high-performing agencies that are setting new standards for creativity, innovation, and strategic excellence. This honor adds to a long history of distinctions for Red House, which has been consistently recognized for excellence in demand generation, account-based marketing, and data-driven pipeline acceleration. The agency partners with leading brands across highly regulated and complex industries including Financial Services and Insurance, Healthcare, Manufacturing, Supply Chain, and Technology.

“This recognition reflects the kind of work B2B marketers are demanding today—more strategic, more accountable, and more integrated,” said Dan Hansen, Senior Partner at Red House. “Our team thrives in complicated environments where there’s no off-the-shelf answer, and where smart strategy, data, and creative must work together to move the pipeline.”

Chief Marketer’s editors selected the 2026 honorees from agencies nationwide based on demonstrated client results, strategic excellence, case-study performance, creative innovation, and the ability to influence the direction of B2B and integrated marketing.
